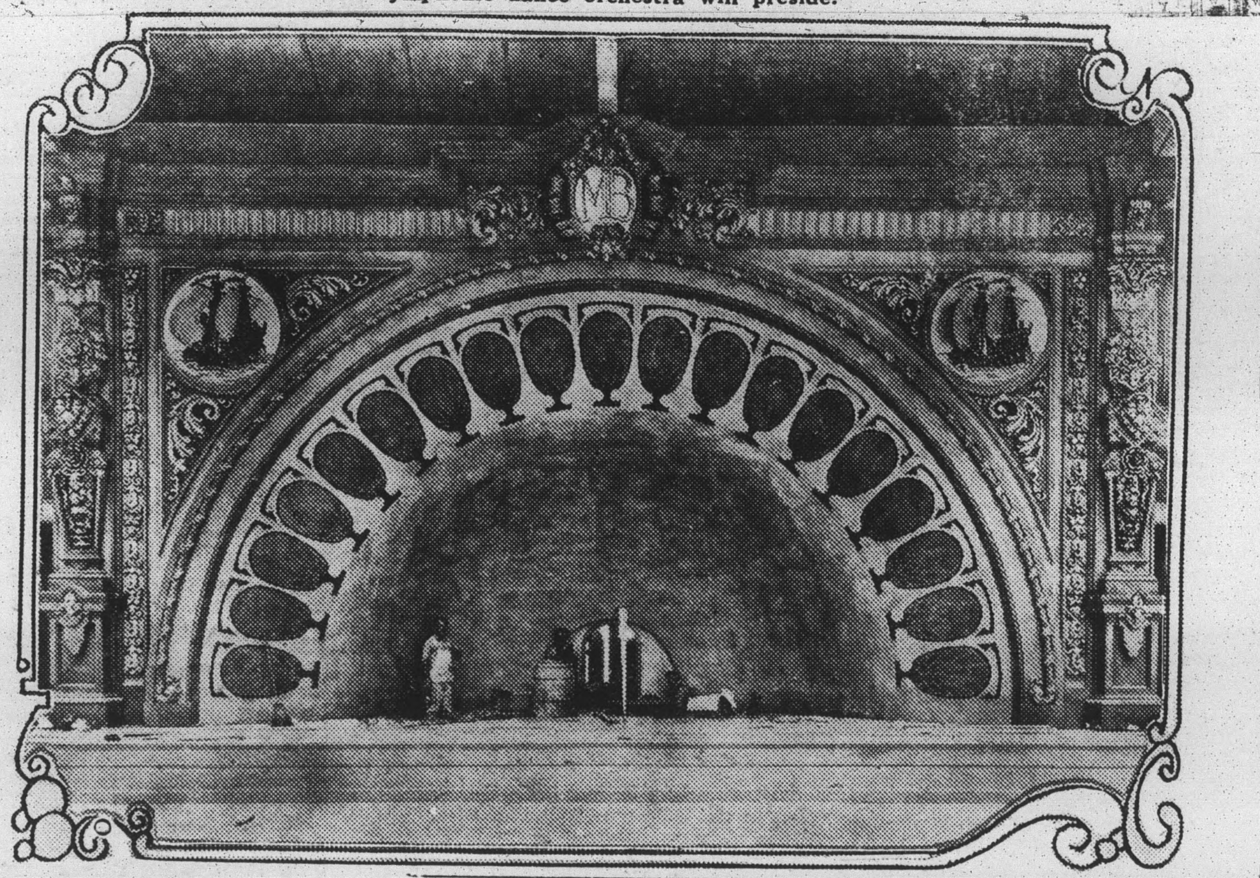
Beauty and Bigness of Mission Beach Command Admiration

THE MAGNIFICENT CASINO AT MISSION BEACH AMUSEMENT CENTER will be one of the most interesting features for first-nighters at the dedication of San Diego's new pleasure resort on May 29. The picture herewith shows the imposing facade of the orchestral "shell" where Cliff Webster's fourteen-piece Mission Beach symphonic dance orchestra will preside.



GALA CEREMONIES FIXED FOR FORMAL DEBUT OF MISSION BEACH

Official announcement of the dedication and opening of San Diego's splendid new pleasure resort at Mission Beach on May 29 and 30 is made by John D. Spreckels, president of the J. D. & A. B. Spreckels Securities company, which has financed the vast enterprise.

Dedication of the Amusement Center, which henceforth will reflect the life and color of San Diego's summer and winter seasons, will include programs in the half-million dollar bath house and the magnificent dance casino. Ceremonies commence Friday night, May 29, when the Amusement Center will be unfolded to the public in all of its pristine glory, followed by the great formal celebration on Saturday, May 30.

COMMUNITY CLUBS ARRANGE SKATING PARTIES AT M. B. ROLLER RINK

During this week special skating parties from La Mesa and San Diego have enjoyed the happy and healthy amusement afforded at the Mission Beach Roller Rink, where the jolly and popular proprietor, Edward A. Kickham, extends a hearty greeting to all. Last Saturday night there was an exceptionally large attendance, including the Young People's Club of the Central Christian Church, and on next Tuesday there will be a big outing held at the rink by the First Christian Church. The fourth outing and skating class festivities of Central Christian Church Club will be held on next Friday, May 22.

PLAYGROUND PETITION STRIKES ANOTHER SNAG

The city council was advised this week by city attorney Higgins that the form of the playground petition recently submitted was illegal, particularly in regard to the heading. It should have read for purchase of property, instead of improvement of property, necessitating probably the preparation and circulation of another petition.

SAN PEDRO PAPER PRAISES CONSTRUCTIVE PROGRAM AT MISSION BEACH

The following is taken from a feature column of a recent issue of the San Pedro "News," in which the writer assails "civic dwarfs" and a certain "tight-wad" element in the northern city, and incidentally says a number of glowing things about Mission Beach and the big way in which things are done in San Diego:

> "Go down to San Diego and see what they are doing there. Buildings rising everywhere—industry humming in all of its branches.
>
> "Go over to Mission Beach and see what Mr. Spreckels is doing with that former sandy stretch of waste land. He's spending $3,000,000 and almost overnight Mission Beach has developed into an amusement and seaside resort that would make Venice, Santa Monica and Ocean Park look like kindergarten playgrounds in comparison.

Mission Beach News Notes

By MRS. F. G. GREENFIELD
726 Ormond Court
Special Representative
For "The Beach News."

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McCoy moved this week into a new cottage at 720 Pismo court.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Andrews have opened a fine new soft drink and lunch stand on Queenstown court.

Mrs. Walter Kaul of Bayside Walk spent the week-end in Glendale visiting a former Mission Beach resident there, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McDuell, who are rejoicing in the birth of a new baby. Friends on the Beach will be glad to hear about the new arrival.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Asher and daughter, Elizabeth, spent last week at the Willows in Alpine.

Chris Schultz formerly in business in San Diego, is going to open soon a complete plumbing shop on cor. of San Jose and Mission boulevard.

A. G. Edwards, of San Diego is building a fine new home on Bayside Walk and Newport court.

Raymond Harris, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Harris, won the red ribbon and second prize on a 50 yard dash in a swimming contest given by the A. A. U. at Los Barros Baths on May 1. Master Raymond, only 11 years of age, was a close contestant for 1st prize which a 13 year old boy won.

Miss Pauline Krentz from Boston Mass., has been the guest of J. M. Asher for the past two weeks. She is now actively engaged in social service work at the Naval hospital in San Diego and is greatly enthusiastic over Mission Beach, for its wonderful climate and sports.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Sutton, prominent residents of Lemon Grove, are spending a few days at their cottage on Ormond court. Their daughter, Mrs. M. S. Bettinson and guests will arrive for the week end.

Mrs. Eugene Paynter formerly of Fresno, has leased a cottage at 810 Ormond court for the year.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Turner of Verona court, have gone north for a vacation trip visiting friends and seeing new places along their journey.

A new place will be open for business, June 1, called the "Poppy Coffee Shop on Mission boulevard under the proprietorship of Mr. A. E. Tibbitts.

Seventy business girls, members of the Y. W. C. A. spent Tuesday night at Shirley cottage for their May festival stunt. Songs, dancing and a marshmellow roast on the beach filled the happy hours.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Harris of Bayside Walk are home from a two weeks auto trip to Portland, Oregon, where Mr. Harris was formerly in the Candy business. Closing all interests there he has placed his stake in Mission Beach, believing it to be the most ideal home place he could ever locate. With his skill as a nimrod—and the wonderful fishing facilities right about him—what more can a man want.

The West Coast Drug Company has opened two new stores in Mission Beach. One in the new post office building on Mission boulevard and another in the New Bath House at the amusement center, putting Mr. J. B. Mock as manager of both places.

GREAT ARRAY OF STARS AMONG CURRENT BOOKINGS BY MANAGER ERICSSON

Leading lights of the movie world will shine at the Ocean theatre next week in rapid succession. Beginning tonight (Saturday) with William Farnum in "Wolves of the Night," the sequence will bring "Broken Barriers" on Sunday with Norma Shearer, James Kirkwood and Adolph Menson in the principal roles. On next Tuesday and Wednesday the great Lon Chaney will be seen in his master production of "The Monster," and on Thursday and Friday, Mildred Davis and Kenneth Harlan will produce "Temporary Marriage." Good comedy is always an added attraction.

LEGAL BATTLE WAGING FOR VALUABLE ESTATE IN OCEAN BEACH

A legal battle for the estate of Alfred Hinde, valued at more than $50,000 and less than $100,000 was opened in Judge W. P. Cary's court before a jury this week, with four neices and two nephews of the deceased arrayed against Arthur Diedrichsen, a friend of the deceased and sole legatee under an alleged will which the blood heirs claim is a forgery.

The suit is for revocation of the will, which names Diedrichsen as executor, as well as sole devisee and legatee of the estate that includes considerable real property in Ocean Beach and bonds listed as of $55,000 value.

A Just Critique of Katherine Tingley's Unparalleled Production of "The Eumenides"

By F. ARCHIBALD

To see "The Eumenides" as Katherine Tingley produces it in her Greek Theater at Point Loma is an acknowledged dramatic treat. But it is also a mystical experience, and as I sat in that beautiful theater Thursday, May 7, with the august Olympian company that makes up the cast, I wondered if some giant hand had not erased a little trifle of twenty-three centuries from the screen of time, and if this were not Athens of old.

No more ideal setting could be found, in any case, not even in the shadow of the Acropolis, than the Greek Theater of Lomaland, for this wonderful play—the third and greatest of the immortal Oresteian Triology. And the way Madame Tingley has adapted it to the uses of this drama, in which the vastness of the theme itself must be balanced by breadth and largeness in the scenic setting or the result will be pinched and flat, is something that the greatest modern producer could take a lesson from. For she presses into service hillside, canyon and environing groves, even the distant ocean and the night with its stars and waxing moon, and uses the ensemble in a manner that is unparalleled. The opening scene strikes at once the keynote of largeness, immensity.

The action takes place in two scenes—the first being the shrine of the oracle at Delphi—and for this she utilizes the forest height on one side of the arena or stage. This is a daring innovation, but a wholly successful one. There the Pythian Prophetess speaks, there the Furies lie asleep, and from there Apollo bids them begone. On that height, too, Athena enters in a chariot drawn by gleaming white horses, descending from that point into the arena, where the action in the main takes place.

The parts were taken by young students of the Theosophical University, all of whom were trained, I understand, by Katherine Tingley herself. Thanks to that, the words rang out as old Aeschylus must have intended when he first gave this great play and its message to the people of Athens.

The drama is given in English verse, and the acoustics of the theater are so exceptional that not a syllable was lost. It was a joy to hear the fine declaiming of those stately lines—and what a repose lay in them after so much in modern plays that is clipped and neglected as to English, trivial and frivolous, even undignified, as to theme! Why do we not have this old Greek play in every city of our land? Is San Diego the only place in the world that can contribute multitudes, crowds of people, to witness it every time it is given—and no matter how many times? Surely it is not.

I saw the Lomaland performance years ago, and last night a different cast spoke the inspiring lines. Athena, Apollo, the Pythian Prophetess, the ghost of the murdered Clytemnestra, and Orestes, scion of the blood-stained House of Atreus, comprise the principal roles. But soldiers, archers, flower-girls, the stately Areopagites or Judges, the Furies, dancers, and the rest swell the sum to very near two hundred.

The climax was reached when the ugly Furies (and if ever hags were more suggestive of "cavernous depths" and the grisly horrors of the nether-world without sacrificing the dramatic-artistic note, I never imagined them) were transformed into beautiful, white-robed, flower-crowned "Eumenides" of "Beneficent Ones" by the magical persuasion of Athena. The dance which followed was a poem, a rapture made tangible, a very breath out of the best life had to offer in the days of "the Good, the Beautiful, and the True."

And this brings one to the music—something one does not associate with Greek dramatic art because so little is known about it. Archaeologists have not been obliging in the matter of Greek music, and the very little that has come to light is so different from our modern music that composers have in general let it alone. But in this drama we have Greek music, and music in abundance, one example—the ancient Hymn to Apollo, found at Delphi a few years ago—being used by Katherine Tingley as a contribution from the past; but the rest of it composed—and in the old Greek modes, too,—by one of her own students. And wonderful music it was. It was as Greek as Greece itself, and followed well after the modern selections played by the large orchestra before the performance began. Massenet's "Erinnyes," composed especially for this play, was one selection. It was played extremely well, and under the conducting of a young man who, I was told, had received his entire musical education in the Raja-Yoga College and Theosophical University from which Madame Tingley draws for her productions.

I went there hungry for Beauty, just Beauty—and I have come away satisfied, filled. I went there sick of the inanities that parade as "the drama" everywhere you look today, and which ruin the effect and influence of the few really great things being produced—but I have come away with new optimism, new hope in my soul, new faith in humanity and in its power to reduce to order even that bungled bedlam and trial we call "daily life."

To see this play is an education. But not merely for the mind and the intellectual side of the nature. To

Charge That Americans Neglect Their Gardens

Americans, charged by Europeans with a disregard of things artistic, are guilty on one count at least, according to Ralph R. Root, president of the Society of Landscape Architects and chairman of the landscape and garden committee of the Chicago fifth annual "Own Your Home" exposition, who states that Americans are neglecting their gardens.

"Every year there are fewer and fewer gardens planted, particularly the flower garden, that is fast dying in this country. Years ago many Americans beautified their towns as well as their homes with lovely gardens, though we never showed the interest that Europeans, particularly the English people, take in their little plots of ground.

"In England the poorest shack of a house has its carefully kept rose garden, and the English countryside in the spring is a real fairyland of beauty.

"We have forgotten the charm of flower gardens and in an effort to reinterest the public in the importance of this phase of home ownership, old-fashioned English rose gardens will be planted at the national "Own Your Home" expositions to be held this year in Chicago, New York city, Philadelphia and Buffalo.

Work for Improvement of the Rural School

A campaign to bring the problem of the small rural school prominently before the legislatures of 42 states is expected to effect definite improvement in rural school standards, according to an announcement by the United States bureau of education.

Many new laws pertaining to schools are pending. Among these, educational leaders are laying particular stress upon the need for laws exacting higher qualifications for teachers' certificates and standardization of small one, two and three-teacher schools.

Reports to the bureau of education indicate that the supply of teachers is now more nearly adequate to fill the demand than for many years, and that the time is opportune for more stringent regulation of teacher certification.

"The emergency is now over and disregard of professional standards is no longer necessary," it is declared by the bureau. High school enrollment has increased during the last ten years in an unprecedented manner. There are plenty of high school graduates anxious to prepare themselves to be teachers.

Find That Beauty Pays

Where villages are being made more beautiful, the impetus has come in nearly every case from local initiative. Villages that have well-planned streets, attractive recreation spots, and pleasing approaches are nearly always indebted for these advantages to the energy and public spirit of some small group of citizens. Under such inspiration dump heaps have been turned into garden spots, unsightly shacks and dilapidated stores have been torn down and replaced by smart, substantial business buildings, and extensive programs of landscape gardening and tree planting have been undertaken.

Villages that have embarked on this path are finding that beauty pays. It improves local business and attracts tourist business. It enhances real estate values, and has a powerful influence in raising individual standards of efficiency and enterprise.

Pointer for Dissatisfied

If you don't like Ozark and Dale county, move. You are not hobbled here. Space is valuable here now. We want only men who are for the old town and county. And, besides, you do not want to remain where you are not wanted. If you are a fault-finder, a trouble-maker, a knocker, against good schools and churches, can't see any good in your neighbors and the good men and women who make this good city and country, please move. And, the quicker you move, the quicker all the people will rise up and call you blessed.—Ozark (Ala.) Southern Star.

Worth All It Costs

The American town, as a rule, is ugly, thrown together in piecemeal, without regard to beauty in the unit or harmony in the groupings. It is interesting to note that the Department of Agriculture is endeavoring to stimulate a keener interest in the beautification of American villages. It is all worth while. It is quite feasible. The cost is small compared with the returns. Even inexpensive houses may be made pretty in design.

Value of Remodeling

Remodeling homes represents not only a salvaging process of much economic value, but it is also an absorbing and educative enterprise and is having no little civic value in that it is restoring whole run-down neighborhoods, bringing back real estate value, and is at the same time preserving hundreds of the charming specimens of the architecture of the period preceding the Civil war, according to Richard G. Kimbell, architect of the National Lumber Manufacturers' association.

SHOEBILL'S SMARTNESS

Billie Brownie, as you know, was given permission by Mother Nature to talk to all of her children and to understand what was said by them, as well as having them understand Billie Brownie.

He had been wanting for some time to visit the Shaebill which had arrived from Africa some time before and which had taken up its residence in the zoo.

So, one morning, bright and early, while the dew was on the grass and the birds were singing their early morning concert, Billie Brownie packed a little lunch of Brownie sandwiches, and started forth for a day's trip.

He expected to call on some others besides the Shoebill, so that it was well to have some food with him, as he might get very hungry before night came.

He had some nuts and bananas and other good things to give to some of the animals and he had these in another package.

He put both of these packages in the knapsack he wore over his back when he went on trips, and started out.

So, as soon as he reached the zoo, he went to call on the Shoebill.

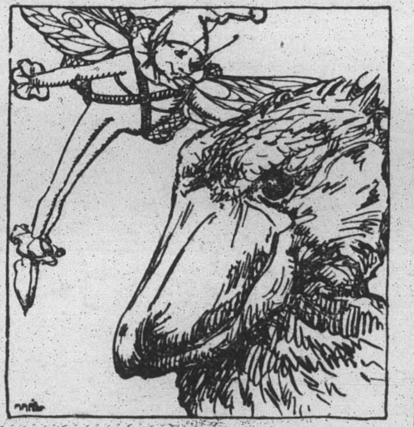
"I will have to get around to the other side of your face," said Billie Brownie, "to see your other eye."

Then, when he got around to the other side of Shoebill's face it seemed as though he were still being looked at out of one eye of the Shoebill's.

"Your face is so long," said Billie.

The Shoebill didn't seem to mind that in the least. As a matter of fact, Billie hadn't meant to say just that, but in going from one side of the Shoebill to the other it had seemed quite a natural thing to say.

Of course Billie knew that the animals were rather proud of all their unusual points, but he didn't know the Shoebill well at all and he didn't quite know what made a Shoebill pleased and what made him mad.



He Went to Call on the Shoebill.

"I beg your pardon, Shoebill, if I have offended you," Billie Brownie said.

"Needn't beg pardon," said the Shoebill, "for I'm not offended. Old Grandfather Shoebill used to say to us back in our African home:

"'Don't get offended, Shoebills. It only causes you to feel unhappy, and being unhappy when you don't need to be unhappy is a waste of beautiful, beautiful time.'

"So I try to keep my grandfather's advice in mind."

"I'm glad to be cheered up," said Billie Brownie, "as I've been a little sad today.

"I met a tattle-tale child on my way here and a tattle-tale child always makes a Brownie very sad."

"I'll tell you a jolly story," said Shoebill. "My beak is a great, long beak as you can see.

"It's somewhat the shape of a shoe as you can also see, and as you've heard before. I mean that you know that is the reason why we have such a family name.

"Now I have a jolly reason why I think we got that name. Of course it is only my little reason and so don't put it down as natural history.

"Whatever else I've told you is so—we do come from Africa and we're named Shoebill because our beaks look something like a shoe. But when I tell you my own jolly reason it is only my own little story to cheer you up.

"I think that there came a time when news even reached Africa about the price of shoes.

"Fathers were worried, mothers were worried, everyone was worried.

"'The price of children's shoes,' they kept hearing it all the time and it had a sound they didn't like. So they said, 'Let's all of us look like a shoe and always have our shoe with us. Then we'll always have something to show when people try to frighten us with the price of shoes for children.

"'We won't need shoes of course, but people may try to upset us by talking about such things and we'll always have a shoe for every member of the family and a bill at the same time which belongs to us and which no one can send in at the first of the month.'"

Billie Brownie laughed and the Shoebill winked his eye. "I cheered you," he said brightly.

Ratio of Transformer Should Be From Three to Six to One. Variable Condenser Also Must Be of the Proper Capacity.

By F. M. RUSSELL

When a radio receiver is to be used in the home where it is operated by all members of the family, both young and old, it should possess certain features such as simplicity in operation, perfectly clear and howlless reception, good receiving range, loud-speaking output, and a logged dial that eliminates the guess-work of tuning and makes it possible for one who never saw or heard the set before to get any station desired with it, by referring to the dial reading.

The little two-tube set illustrated will do all the above things in an efficient manner. This is due to the circuit used which is simple to build and simple to operate, but incorporates several unique features that give it qualities seldom found in even a two-control outfit. It has automatic or spontaneous regeneration and an aperiodic primary. The regeneration increases volume and receiving range and the aperiodic primary makes the set selective and allows logging of the single tuning control.

Never under any circumstances will the set howl if the parts are arranged correctly and the values are as specified. The secret of this is in the method of obtaining regeneration and the fixed condenser across the audio-frequency transformer.

The readings of the variable condenser dial, which is the only control, are permanent. If a station is once received at say 20 degrees it will always be received again at that point. This applies to distant as well as local stations.

Parts Used.

The above results are obtained by virtue of a special tuning unit in the form of a coupler. It consists of two spiderweb coils, one of five turns and one of 45 turns. The five-turn coil is the aperiodic primary and the other is the combined plate and secondary coil. It is not difficult to build the unit. Spiderweb coils of the proper size can be purchased at a radio store or they can be home wound on a cardboard or wood frame. This should have 11, 13 or 15 spokes. The winding method is two over and two under, in other words, the wire is first wound under two spokes and then over two spokes, etc. About one-half pound of No. 22 double silk or cotton-covered wire is necessary for this. Do not use enamel.

To Construct.

Mount the coils when finished as shown in the illustration. The coupling between them may vary anywhere from one-quarter to one-half inch according to the selectivity desired. Lay out the sockets, transformer and the rest of the apparatus as shown and wire with the direct connection method, that is, make all connections direct from terminal to terminal in the shortest possible manner. This may not look "pretty" but it will reduce the resistance and inter-circuit interference, and make the set more efficient. After all it's results we want, not beauty.

The parts necessary to construct the set aside from the special coupler are as follows:

One .0005 variable condenser.
One geared vernier dial for condenser.
One low ratio audio frequency transformer.
One .001 fixed mica condenser.
Two 199-type sockets.
One 25-ohm rheostat.
One 2 to 5-megohm grid leak and .00025 fixed condenser.
One 7 by 14 panel.
One single-circuit jack.
Baseboard, binding posts, screws, wire, etc.

The ratio of the transformer should be anywhere from three to six to one, but not higher. The set will distort if this is violated. The variable condenser also must be of the proper capacity. Any smaller or larger will either not allow the reception of certain wave lengths or bunch the stations up on half the capacity variation. Only one rheostat is used on both tubes.

The adjustment on either is critical and a 25-ohm resistance will take care of them. The connections for the .001 fixed condenser are across the primary and secondary of the transformer to the P and F posts. This must be placed in this position, not across the primary as is customary.

To Tune Set.

Tuning the set merely requires adjusting the rheostat and turning the dial. The stations will come in sometimes without a carrier wave whistle, so it is advisable to turn the dial very slowly and listen intently to be sure a station is not missed. On long distance the adjustment is apt to be critical. A geared vernier is essential because of this. With the ordinary dial many stations would be passed up without the operator's knowledge.—Boston Traveler.

How to Use Pattern to Build Your Sub-Panel

Locating a number of sockets, transformers and other instruments on a sub-base can easily be accomplished without tedious measuring and possible errors by means of a pattern.

The outline of the sub-panel is drawn on a stiff piece of paper and the instruments are placed on it in the exact location to be occupied in the final assembly. As each device is provided with screw holes the work of locating is thereby simplified. When the instruments are finally located to the satisfaction of the builder the end of a match stick is dipped in ink and a mark is made on the paper by passing the stick through each hole. The sketch shows the idea.

Service of Loop Aerial in Securing Selectivity

The greatest objection to the use of a loop aerial in securing maximum selectivity is the loss of volume. When difficulty is experienced from the interference of two or more stations near the same wave length, or when the static becomes so heavy as to drown out even the locals, the trouble may be reduced at least 75 per cent by closing the ground switch, thus grounding the aerial, and connecting the set to a 3 or 4-foot loop of 10 or 12 turns, shunted by a variable condenser, the loop to be placed as near as possible to the wire connecting the aerial to the ground.

Using an ordinary three-circuit tuner and a WD-11 tube, a correspondent writes, I regularly receive 1,000 miles through static that would make reception impossible otherwise, and also cut out code interference practically entirely. The method is equally efficient with a two-circuit set, the only requisite being that the loop be not more than 2 or 3 feet from the ground wire. A plaster wall separating them seems to make no difference, however.—Radio Digest.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Using $3524 worth of newspaper advertising space and employing sixteen outside salesmen, the company which supplies electric service to Victoria and Vancouver, B. C., and 18 other communities, during 1924 sold $112,392 worth of electric household appliances. Numerically this total was divided as follows: 3325 kitchen lighting units, 343 electric cleaners, 272 electric washers and 88 electric ranges.

CROSS-WORD PUZZLES

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

CLIFF WEBSTER RETURNS TO ORGANIZE ORCHESTRA FOR MISSION BEACH CASINO

Enthusiastic over organizing a symphonic dance orchestra of the highest rank for the Mission Beach Casino, Cliff Webster returned early this week from his vacation trip north, where he gathered a lot of material and conferred with many orchestra leaders and musicians. He was given warm co-operation by such noted leaders as Abe Lyman of the Cocoanut Grove orchestra and Art Hickman of the Biltmore Hotel orchestra, both of whom are close personal friends. The best qualified musicians in San Diego and other cities will be engaged for the Mission Beach orchestra, and Director Webster has secured the services of a number of artists, all of whom will be ready for the first rehearsal next week.

FOLK DANCING AND "TURKEY IN THE STRAW" BECOMING POPULAR

The popularity of folk dancing and country dancing as a most enjoyable form of entertainment and recreation is spreading rapidly in San Diego city and county. Middle-aged and elderly people who come out to see the younger ones dance cannot resist the familiar strains of "Turkey in the Straw" and other country dance music, and are soon drawn into a quadrille set or a Virginia Reel, and go home declaring they had not had so much fun since they drove the old horse and buggy eighteen or twenty miles over rough country roads to attend a barn dance in "the good old days."

As for the younger ones, most of whom have been growing up without even knowing there was any kind of dancing but jazz, they are delighted with the variety and the real wholesome fun of the folk dances and country dances.

Community Service has engaged Miss Elizabeth Burchenal, America's foremost authority on folk dancing, to come to San Diego for the first two weeks in June. Miss Burchenal will conduct four courses of five lessons each in elementary and advanced folk dancing and American country dancing. Both men and wome are enrolling for these classes. Besides the individuals who will enjoy the lessons, clubs, lodges, churches and other organizations will find their social meetings next year much more enjoyable if some of their members learn these group dances and help to introduce them.

Further information may be obtained from Community Service, 645 A street, phone 622-25, or from members of the committee in charge, as follows: Helen Marston, Mrs. Adele M. Outcalt, Mrs. Ethel D. Mintzer, Jessie R. Tanner, Mrs. W. A. Price, Theodore Treutlein andE. H. Dowell.

EVENING SLIPPERS

When down the marble steps girls ran tonight,
Like brilliant birds were their slim shoes of green,
Of amber-rose, of mauve, of crimosin,
Shell-fluted with thread-silver . . . lazulite,
Dawn-gold, pale orchid-violet, silver, white!
Why, every girl was shod like some brave queen.
Nay, what famed royal foot has dancetime seen
So evening-slippered . . . blue and bronze and bright?

These graceful girls with feet in velvet shoon,
Those in mosaic doeskins soft encased,
Were flying fairies from the iris moon:
Titanias all—their feet by flowers embraced.
They danced . . . shoe petals blown upon a tune . . .
Shoe butterflies by shining musics chased.

In May, 1925, "Lyric West."

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

HONORABLE DEFEAT

BE NOT ashamed of defeat that is clothed with honor. It is better by far to be true to yourself, loyal to exalted principles, able at all times to look into your mirror without a sense of guilt, than to wear fine raiment and sit among kings.

It is better to sleep sweetly at night with a clear conscience than to toss about in fear of punishment, which you know you have earned and rightfully deserve.

It is better to be poor all your days than to cheat, lie and steal while heaping up wealth in the frantic chase that frequently leads to broken health and groveling age, before the allotted time of three score years and ten.

If you have preserved your honor in the hard struggle for existence, if your heart is full of joyous faith when the sky begins to darken at your coming night, you have within you a sublime peace which all the wealth of the world cannot buy, and which, if offered you, you would brush aside as worthless dross.

Be not dismayed if you cannot spring up in a clap to the heights of power through chicanery; but instead be filled with confidence, because the years in which you have labored without tainting your soul have left you clean, clear-eyed and hopeful.

It is not for every worthy man to win in battle; it is not for every blooming rose to be the queen of roses; it is not for every tree to be an oak, nor every stream to be a river.

Each has its part in the scheme of things of which we mortals know nothing; each is playing its role for which it was created and intended.

The thing for man to do is to learn humility, patience, charity, chastity, and march ahead undaunted regardless of the sneers of the vain and thoughtless.

Look upward and move on, in storm and calm.

Follow open-eyed Faith though the night be dark and the way be rough—there's a radiancy of sunlight a little way ahead speeding toward you on the wings of a new day.

Think of this glorious dawning; forget your defeats, defects, disappointments and griefs. Do your best without faltering or bemoaning your lot, and you will be joyously happy in the end that you have retained your honor.

THE FOLKS AROUND

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

IT ISN'T what makes summer hot
Or what makes winter cold
That keeps us blue or warms us through
Or makes us young or old.
Not sun nor hail nor calm nor gale
Makes sad or glad the way—
But more the kind of folks we find
Around us ev'ry day.

When night is gone the day may dawn
With blue and perfect skies;
But, if a word unkind is heard,
Then all the glory dies.
The morn may bring the hail to sting
But, if our hearts are warm,
We'll trudge along and sing our song
And never mind the storm!

Not sun or moon makes night or noon,
Nor season spring or fall;
We give life cheer or make it drear
For others, after all.
God grant your smile lights ev'ry mile,
Whatever road you go!
Make fair the day, make glad the way,
And you will find it so!

They Had Been Buddies

By HERBERT L. McNARY

(©, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

THE sweat-bathed roan horse and his tanned, lean-visaged rider slipped through the seemingly trackless woods as skillfully as any fur-bearing prowler. Suddenly horse and rider debouched upon a clearing, and as suddenly the horse came to an abrupt halt.

With scarcely a perceptible motion the khaki-clad rider's steel-gray eyes were fastened on the small cabin in the clearing. Then horse and rider moved off as silently as they had come, and soon the rider returned alone.

He approached the cabin from the rear. Cautiously he peered in the window, and he became aware of the slight movement in the corner bunk. Then he heard a muffled groan followed by incoherent muttering. The man in the bunk turned, rolling off a blanket and exposing a dirty, blood-matted and crudely bandaged leg, while from a fever-flushed face burnt the staring eyes of a raving man. On the flannel shirt of the man in the bunk gleamed a nickeled badge. The other bent low and read: "Internal Revenue." He smiled.

The newcomer first removed a heavy forty-four from the belt of the internal revenue officer and placed it in his own belt. He took the last cigarette from a package and lit it. Now he broke the officer's revolver and put the cartridges into the cigarette package, and crossing to the cupboard hid the package behind some tins.

"Get that Silver Fox," he heard. . . . I'll get him. . . . The lone rum runner, is he? . . . Won't this war ever end? . . . I'm sick of the trenches. . . . Get those Germans. . . . Get that Silver Fox."

"Guess you haven't eaten for some time," grumbled the cook as he prepared to feed his patient, "but if you was in the trenches like you say, then you know what it means to be hungry. So do I. Some of them places you named I seen myself, buddy."

"Who are you?" asked the revenue man.

"Call me George," replied that one laconically.

"My name's Floyd—Tom Floyd."

"So you told me."

"When?"

"In your raving."

"Oh! I wonder where I am?"

"Choteau county, Montana. You were chasing the Silver Fox—you told me that also."

"I must have told you a lot. One of the rum gang got me in the leg. Wonder how long ago that was."

"Musta been a week. I found you raving and poisoned, but I pulled you through."

"Then I owe you my life," declared the officer quietly.

"Don't mention it. Most of the time you was raving about places in France I was there, too. That's where my hair turned gray. I was with the Third."

"Mine was the First."

"So you told me—well, there's a few things I want to do. Take it easy and I'll be back in time to get supper."

When the buddy with the prematurely grayed hair returned late that afternoon it was to find the revenue man sunning himself outside the cabin.

"I guess I can be leaving soon," said the officer with a smile.

"Don't hurry, there's plenty of food."

"Thanks; but I have to track the Silver Fox."

The other removed his hat and rubbed his hand reflectively over his gray hair. "I guess he's hard to locate from what I hear."

"So I understand—by the way, you didn't find a revolver did you?"

"Yes, I thought you might hurt yourself in your ravings so I took it away. Here it is."

"Guess I had better get a pail of water," said he who called himself George.

While he was away the revenue officer re-entered the cabin and crossed to the cupboard. From this he removed the package that contained the cartridges. When he placed the package back again it was empty.

After supper the two sat outside watching the sun sink behind the tall trees.

"What do you think of my chances of getting the Silver Fox?" asked the officer, breaking a long silence.

"You have to see him first."

"I have seen him," was the quiet rejoinder.

The gray-eyed man never moved. He finished his cigarette and then rose leisurely.

"Over in those woods is my horse. I had intended to leave in the morning; but I guess I'll go now."

"Why the hurry?"

"You're right, I'm the Silver Fox. Maybe you'd want to give me a start because of the favor I did you in pulling you through because you was a buddy—well, don't let your conscience bother you because you can't help yourself."

"I have my revolver," answered the officer. "You gave it back to me."

"I know, but I took the pills out. Maybe if you look hard enough you'll find 'em. Well, so long, buddy."

The Silver Fox turned and moved off to where the sun was dropping behind the taller trees. The officer watched him disappear into the silent woods and then he arose. He smiled a bit sadly and drew his revolver. He broke it and gazed a bit reflectively at the cartridges he had inserted while the Silver Fox had gone for water. He smiled and entered the cabin.

Your Last Name

IS IT MANN?

THE fact that this name is derived from the word man, as it was used to indicate a servant or retainer, ought not to be objectionable to those who bear the name. Knight also first indicated a servant or retainer and the good old surnames Chamberlain and Stewart or Stuart were derived from names indicating positions of service. However, it has been pointed out that Mann was an Anglo-Saxon personal name and the surname may have been taken from it. When man is found in compound with other syllables it sometimes is used purely by way of description. Thus we have Goodman and Youngman.

Still another explanation is given of the name and undoubtedly this holds true in certain branches of the family. In this case the name has a local origin and is derived from Le Mans, the capital of Sarthe in France. For instance William, who came from Le Mans, might have been called William Le Mans which eventually would become William Mann.

The Mann family was early established in this country. There was a William Mann who settled in Cambridge, Mass., and a prominent Virginia family of the name. Then there was a Middle-states family of the name descended from a German ancestor of the name of Mann, which is even more usual in Germany than in England.

Horace Mann, born in 1796, the prominent American educator who married a sister of the wife of Nathaniel Hawthorne, was descended from William Mann who settled in Cambridge, Mass. There was also an English Horace Mann—Sir Horace Mann. He was born in 1701, and was the second son of Robert Mann, a London merchant. He was British envoy at Florence and a man of much prominence in the diplomatic world.

ATKINS—Sometimes this is from Adam and sometimes from Arthur Pritchard. This is a Welsh name, now usual in England and the United States, and is derived from "Ap Richard," meaning son of Richard. Contracted, Ap Richard easily becomes Pritchard.

Old-Fashioned Puddings

IN ALMOST any family there will be found some left-over bread which cannot be thrown away and the problem of working it into the menu must be thought out. Here are a few suggestions for desserts using bread or crumbs as a basis:

Cherry Pudding.

Mix one cupful of sifted bread crumbs, one cupful of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder together. Rub in four tablespoonfuls of butter, add a well-beaten egg and one-half cupful of milk, mix all together. Sprinkle a little flour on one cupful of pitted cherries; if canned, drain them and add to the batter. Bake a half hour and serve with a hot vanilla sauce.

Vanilla Sauce.

Mix one tablespoonful of cornstarch with four tablespoonfuls of sugar and a little salt, then pour one cupful of boiling water over the dry mixture and cook until thickened and the starch taste is removed. Beat an egg yolk and the mixture after cooling slightly, add one teaspoonful of vanilla, a teaspoonful of butter and serve.

Spiced Graham Pudding.

Take half a loaf of stale graham bread before it gets too dry and cut off all the hard crust. Press seeded raisins into the bread to cover the entire surface. Make a custard mixture of two cupfuls of cold milk, two eggs, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of mixed spices and one-fourth teaspoonful of nutmeg. Pour in the milk and soak until the bread has entirely absorbed it, turning occasionally to reach all sides. Put into a buttered mold or covered pail and steam one hour. Serve with maple sauce.

Maple Sauce.

Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter, add one-half cupful of soft maple sugar or brown sugar with one-fourth teaspoonful of maple extract and a few drops of lemon juice. Set in a cool place to harden before using.

Raisin Sauce.

Boil one and one-half cupfuls of water and one-third cupful of raisins fifteen minutes, add one-fourth cupful of brown sugar and boil fifteen minutes longer. Thicken with a teaspoonful of flour and butter blended with a little of the water, add a sprinkling of salt and nutmeg and another teaspoonful of butter just as it is served.

Green Peppers on Toast.

Wash, dry and toast over a low flame eight medium-sized peppers and remove the seeds. Cut into long strips. Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter, add one-half of a small onion minced fine and the pepper strips, one cupful of celery cut into inch lengths. Add one-half cupful of milk, cover and simmer for five minutes. Then add three tablespoonfuls of flour, stir until well blended and add one-half cupful of milk, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt and pepper to taste. Heat until smooth and creamy. Toast six slices of bread, butter, and pour the pepper mixture over them.

AS TOLD BY Irvin S. Cobb

A BARGAIN WAS DRIVEN

IN THE old days a newspaper writer in Chicago fell heir to a pass good for four on the opening day at one at the racetracks. He invited three friends to accompany him. They made the trip in a decrepit automobile of ancient vintage which the journalist had acquired a few days earlier in part payment of a debt.

At the gate a ticket taker examined their credentials and permitted the party to drive in. They were just inside the fence when the attendant remembered he had forgotten to collect for parking space.

"Hey! Wait a minute!" he called, and our hero halted the machine.

"It's one dollar for the car," said the man.

"How's that?" inquired the driver.

"One dollar for the car."

"Gimme the dollar," said the journalist, "the car is yours!"

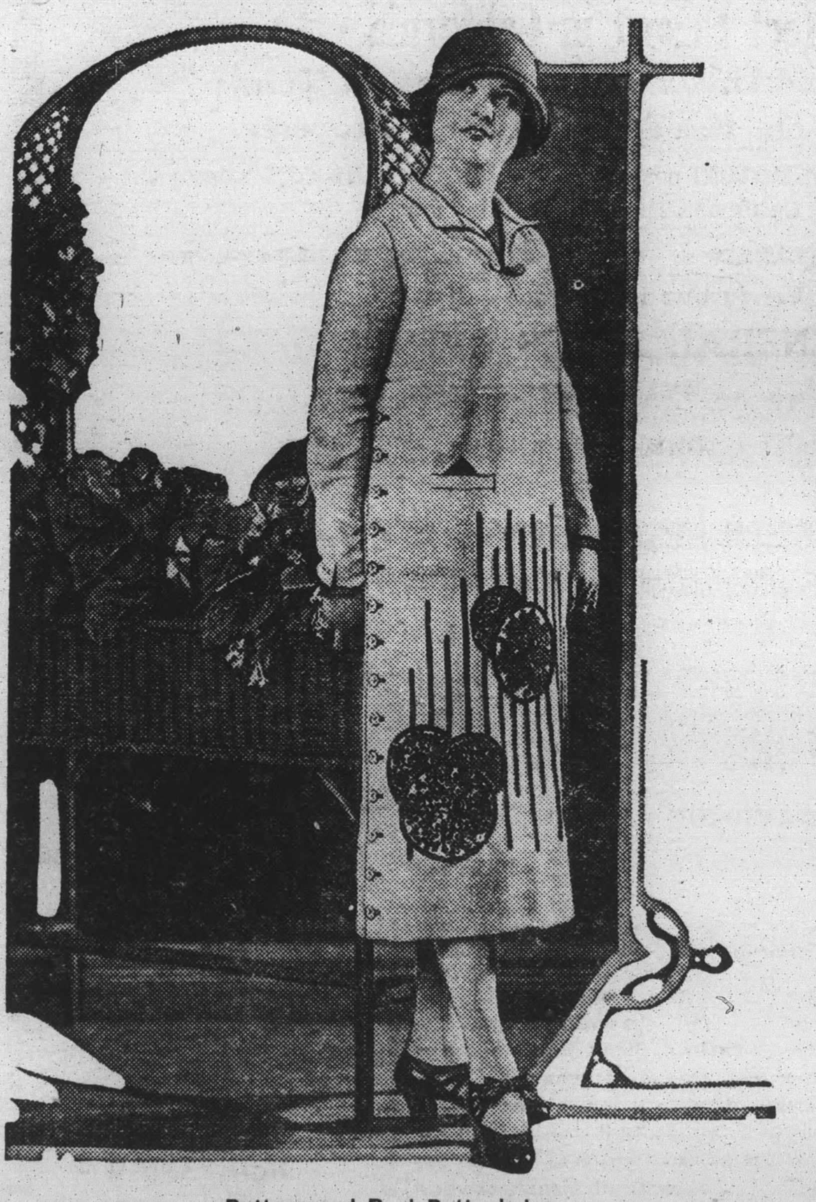
BUTTONS ADORN CLOTH FROCKS; RIBBONS MAKE MILLINERY A JOY

IF SEEING is believing, it is surely a jubilee year for buttons. Not only buttons by the hundreds serve as trimming, but buttons with sure enough old-fashioned (now new-fashioned) hand-worked buttonholes, have come into smart use. There is no longer a mystery as to "button, button, who has the button." Our new cloth frocks give the answer.

At this moment the mode calls for one-piece dresses which button along the underarm seam just as the picture shows. Two buttons are also placed at the V-neck opening of this swagger frock of kasha cloth in the new blonde shade.



Buttons and Real Buttonholes.

Stylists are using buttons, positioned closely, mind you, all the way down the front of satin frocks which describe a slim silhouette until within a few inches of the hem, where godets are inset for proper flare. Sometimes rows of buttons are repeated even down the sides and back. In fact, the button-down-the-front frock is quite the popular idea this season. There is nothing quite so en mode for street, school and business wear as a wool jersey, fine wool twill, kasha cloth, or extra heavy crepe de chine one-piece dress, which fastens with tiny pearl buttons from neck to hemline down the front, the same having long tight sleeves and the inevitable yoke, for yokes are fashion's special pride this spring. To this demure costume, preferably in Quaker gray, string color, beige, cocoa or, if one chooses, pastel shades, dainty lingerie cuffs and collars add the feminine touch.

It is interesting to know that if one plans to trim with buttons, such as bordering the edge of cuffs, collar, or revers, a treatment very popular, buttons can be bought by the yard—that is, they are sewed on an almost invisible tape. This saves time, labor and assures an even placement, which has much to do with appearance.

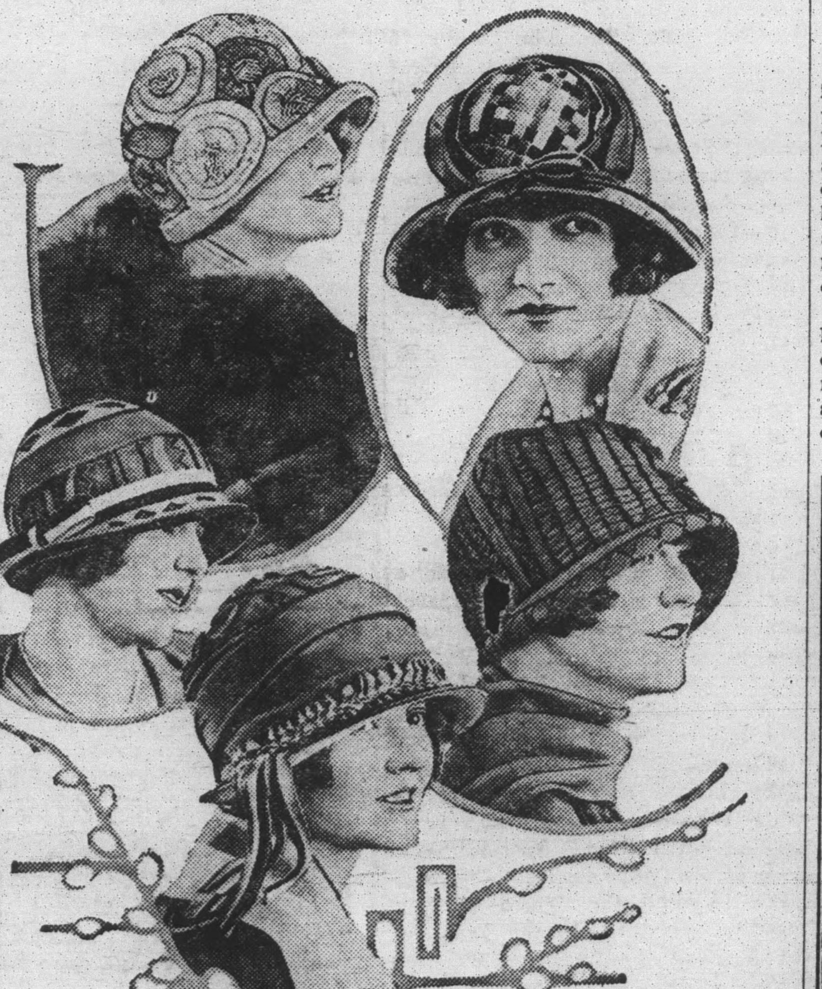
Tinted pearl buttons find favor and an added embellishment is supplied in that they are often sewed on with thread of contrasting color.

Narrow ribbons, both the novelty kind and plain, are challenging deft fingers to ply them into intricacies which make millinery a thing of beauty and a joy—if not forever, then, at least, for this spring and summer. In the manipulation of little ribbons, our chapeau fashionists must have "caught the vision" from the curious folding, banding and basket-weaving which children accomplish with bright-colored paper in their kindergarten work; not implying, if you please, the least hint of the amateur in the finesse of these intricate looking ribbon cocardes, motifs and such. On the contrary, they are the "pink of perfection" in their tailored aspect.

There is a wave of enthusiasm this very moment for prim ribbon fantasies on smart colorful felt shapes, for the trig felt shape is more of a favorite than ever. The newest idea is to begin at the tip-top of the crown with a ribbon "idea" and then work down one side and let some loops and ends fall over the brim in a flattering manner. A trim-while-you-wait scheme is to cut a slot at one side of the felt crown, passing loops and ends of the ribbon through this.

The Parisian vogue calls for narrow velvet ribbon.

The hats illustrated in this group are all featured with narrow ribbons. The chapeau first in this collection makes its plea of attractiveness through a contrivance of ribbon wheels (each a different color), which cover the entire crown.



Showing Clever Ribbon Intricacies.

To the right, one notes a motif formed of silver gun-metal and black velvet ribbon, the same basket woven.

Ribbon intricacy gives distinction to the model centered to the right. Knife plaiting and braiding are applied to the grosgrain ribbon for the crown, with the narrow brim picoted about the edge.

White and black ribbon girdles and cravats the hat to the left center.

Narrow ombre ribbon, in variegated colors with tinsel, lends its fascination to the model shown last in the group.

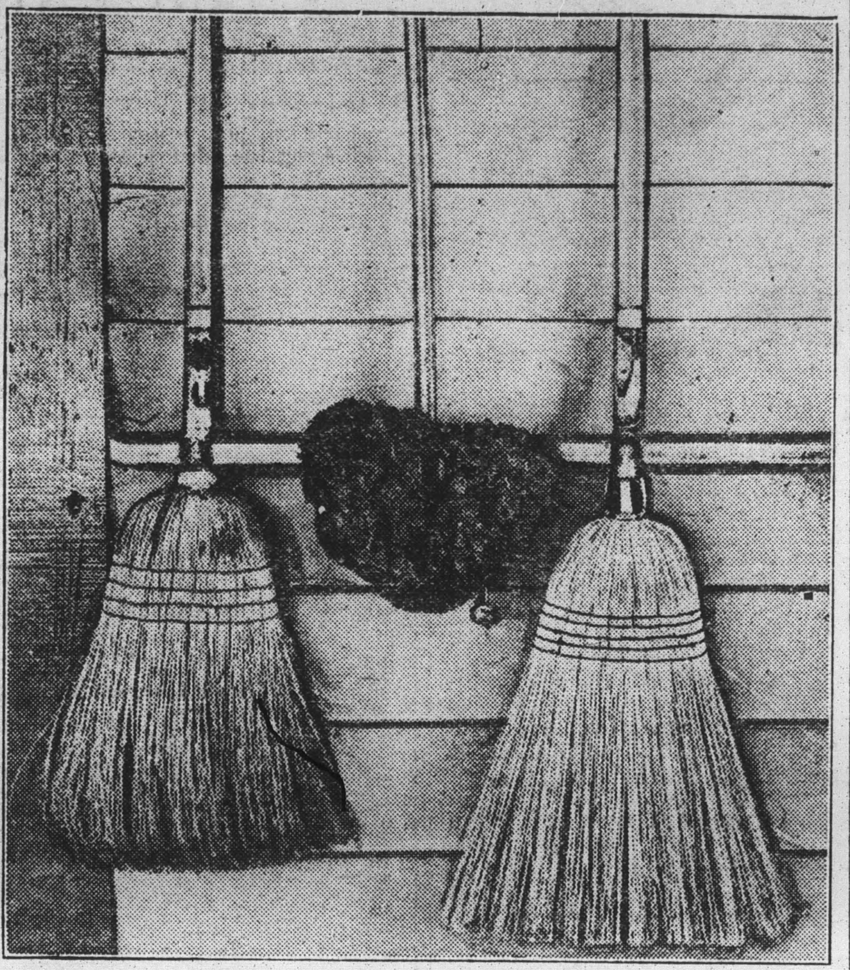
BROOMS SHOULD NOT TOUCH CLOSET FLOORS



Proper Manner for Hanging Brooms.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Time and bother are saved if the cleaning tools and materials are kept together in a convenient place, preferably a special closet located where it can be quickly reached from all over the house. If possible, it is well to have on each floor a supply of some of the things most constantly used. As far as possible, cleaning tools should be put away clean and ready for use.

Brooms, brushes and mops should be hung by strings or screw eyes fastened to the handles so that the weight does not rest on the straws, bristles or strings. Another very good arrangement for keeping brooms and mops off the floor is shown in the illustration. The picture was taken by the United States Department of Agriculture at a Virginia farm house, and shows one of the details of a kitchen improved at the suggestion of the extension agent. The back porch or entry is a good place in many homes for keeping these tools together, and at the same time out of the way and as far as possible from where food preparation is going on.

Carpet sweepers also should be turned so that the weight does not come on the brushes. The hair and lint which accumulate in brushes, especially in carpet sweepers, may be taken out with an old buttonhook; a coarse comb or old scissors. Corn brooms may be washed in hot soapsuds, but care must be taken not to let the water rust the wires which hold the straws to the handle.

Bristle brushes may be washed with lukewarm water and a little ammonia (three teaspoonfuls dilute ammonia to the quart) or borax (one teaspoonful to the quart) and then rinsed in clear water. Water is likely to injure the back of a brush and to loosen the cement by which the bristles are held in place in the less expensive makes. The brush should, therefore, not be covered with water, but should be washed by sousing the bristles back and forth in shallow water; it should be dried with the bristles down or with the weight resting on the side of the brush. The drying should be done quickly, but not in an intense heat. Drying in sunshine whitens light bristles. The weighted bristle brush used in polishing floors should be washed occasionally to prevent the accumulation of dirt and wax from darkening the wood.

Mops may be washed in hot suds and rinsed in clear, hot water; they should be quickly dried. Dry mops may be oiled by pouring a few drops of light lubricating oil or any good floor oil into an old dish or a tin box and setting the mop on this for a day or two; or the mop may be sprinkled with a little oil and allowed to stand until the oil spreads through the strings.

CHILDREN REQUIRE PROPER NUTRITION

Much Depends on Mother's Knowledge of Food.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Children must have the right food in order to develop strong bodies. The undernourished child carries a heavy handicap through life. He cannot do as much physically as other children of his age, he tires easily, is more likely to "catch" colds and other diseases, and is inclined to be more sluggish mentally than the properly nourished child.

Good nutrition is not a matter of large expenditure for food; it depends on the mother's knowing what is the right food for her children at different ages, and on her ability to train the children to like and eat what is good for them. Undernourished children are found in the homes of the well-to-do, and well-nourished children in families with very small incomes; the difference is due to knowledge on the part of the mother, and to careful attention at all times to the development of each child.

Orange Juice and Sandwiches of Graham Bread and Lettuce Supply Vitamines and Other Substances That Growing Children Need.

Every mother can help to give her children a fair start in life by watching them closely for signs of good and poor nutrition, followed by efforts to correct any indications of undernourishment. If her child has firm rosy flesh, bright sparkling eyes, strong white teeth, straight sturdy legs, straight back and flat shoulder blades, full rounded chest, and if his body is erect, strong and well-developed, the chances are that he is well-nourished. He should also have a healthy appetite and appear happy, keen and energetic.

If, however, her child shows signs of poor bodily development, such as a stooped back and body generally, "winged" shoulder blades, flat narrow chest, skinny and underdeveloped frame, bow legs or knock knees, pale flabby flesh, dull dark-circled eyes, or decayed uneven teeth, he is undoubtedly undernourished, and the mother should take steps to learn exactly how he should be fed to correct these conditions. Such a child is often nervous and irritable, listless, easily tired, and backward in school. Sometimes he is "finicky" and fussy about food.

It is not likely that any one child will show all the signs of poor nutrition at once. One or more of these signs is sufficient indication to the wise mother that she ought to learn all she can about foods her children need, and take steps to correct the condition she has noticed. Farmers' Bulletin 717 of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, gives helpful information to any mother on the best foods for children, and in the case of a noticeably undernourished child, a physician should be consulted.

Making Fishballs With White Cornmeal Mush

The United States Department of Agriculture suggests the possibility of substituting white cornmeal mush for potato in making fishballs. When made by the following recipe the result compares favorably with those made with potato. They are prepared more easily and quickly.

Cornmeal Fishballs.

2 cupfuls cold white cornmeal mush
1 cupful shredded codfish
1 egg
1 tablespoonful butter

Pick over the codfish and soak it to remove salt, if necessary. Combine the ingredients and drop by spoonfuls into hot fat. Drain on porous paper. The mush must be as dry as possible.

This makes 12 fishballs.

Rice Fritters

3 cupfuls rye flour.
6 teaspoonfuls baking powder.
1½ cupfuls boiled rice.
1 teaspoonful salt.
6 tablespoonfuls sugar.
¼ cupful evaporated milk.
½ cupful water.
3 eggs, beaten.

Mix in order given; drop by spoonfuls into deep, hot fat; brown and drain. Dust with powdered sugar and serve with grape or apple jelly.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

Mission Beach Notes

Mrs. Harriet Challand, wife of Joseph Challand, formerly of England and mother of Mr. Frank Challand our local post master, passed away last Tuesday. Funeral services were held last Friday.

Dr. and Mrs. Frank Lush of Manhatten court, are leaving in a finely equipped Essex car for a long trip back to Ohio, where they will visit relatives and friends and tell them of the glories of Mission Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Snell, proprietors of the P. M. Dairy Co., entertained friends at their lovely home in Mission Beach last Sunday.

Mrs. Paul Chase of La Jolla and her daughter Mrs. Gladys Dale of Hollywood, spent week end with their cousin, Mrs. S. J. Van Dorstan on Ormond court.

A number of gay parties have been on the Beach for the big smelt runs, catching the tiny fish and singing about the big camp fires, making a pretty sight for those who chanced by, or peeped out their windows at the happy throngs.

A large and rousing attendance is expected at the regular monthly meeting of the Mission Beach chamber of commerce in the Shirley cottage on Tuesday, May 19, at 8 p. m. when many civic improvements will be considered.

LATEST SAFEGUARDS PROVIDED FOR BATHERS AT MISSION BEACH

While it is generally conceded that Mission Beach possesses the safest bathing shore in Southern California, nothing will be overlooked in providing every safeguard for patrons of this new seaside resort. J. Wilbur Kyle, manager of the big bathhouse, has announced that a 16-foot lifeboat, built by the San Diego Marine Construction company, will be put into service at Mission Beach. This will be one of several protective measures for bathers. Life lines will extend 800 feet into the surf, anchored at the far end to large can buoys. The life lines will be about 800 feet apart, forming an extensive and safe area for bathers.

A first aid room is being fitted up in the bathhouse, with every facility for the prompt treatment of emergency cases of all kinds. An instance of the thoroughness with which this important adjunct is being equipped is the inclusion of the most improved lungmotor.

Installation of a massive eight-foot fountain at the north end of the main plunge provides a feature which is expected to appeal to every patron of the palace of swim.

A Just Critique

KATHERINE TINGLEY'S PRODUCTION OF "THE EUMENIDES"

see it is an education for the soul, and the absolute up-to-dateness of its theme, the practical application here and now of the great moral lessons that it sets forth—this is what gives it its value. As you listen with bated breath to Athena, and see her give the casting-vote on the side of mercy—which was the other half of justice in the code of Aeschylus and the grand old philosophic Greeks—you feel yourself at one with the loving, trobbing heart of Life itself, real life, not its depraved imitation. And as you see the quick transformation of the Furies into gracious joy-bringers, beautiful messengers of peace, you feel yourself at one with all that is best in the universe. Something in your soul has been uncovered, whose depths and nature you never learned before. Something in you is more perceptive, more spiritually alive. And what is the mission of noble drama if it is not to produce just that? Today, as in Plato's day, virtue and vision are the great realities—and when has any age needed reminders of them more than the present?

You asked me for, and perhaps you are expecting, Mr. Editor, the usual critique. But how can I furnish it forth about so unusual a play? It does not stand on the same narrow field that the "usual" play finds roomy enough and more. It does not appeal to the same levels in human nature. It is different—and because of that, all I can say is: go and see "The Eumenides" if it is ever given again. Go and see it, if it costs you your last dear convention, your last and stiffest prejudice, your last spare hour, your last cent. You will bring back more than you dream.

"The Eumenides" is a garland of lilies from the garden of a great ideal.

BOY SCOUTS NUMBER NEARLY A THOUSAND

Up to the present time the number of active registered Boy Scouts has been far above records made in the past. Last year, during the month of April, there were 818 scouts registered; this year there are 942, with 90 scouts active but not registered. At the close of this month it is expected that the number of scouts actually registered will reach the 1000-mark.

The "Orizaba"

The year 1878 closed with the announcement of the death of Captain Henry J. Johnston, read with deep regret by all San Diego and vicinity.

"As commander of the 'Orizaba'," says the Union, "during the last eleven years he became personally known to nearly every man, woman and child in San Diego, his trips to our port beginning before the erection of the first building in the new town. Captain Johnston first came here in command of the 'Orizaba' on the 9th day of November, 1867, and since that date he has been almost continuously in charge of that steamer, the exceptions being a short period in which he commanded the 'Moses Taylor' to this port, and an occasional detail to other ports. He visited San Diego 264 times in command, and his face was as familiar as that of one of our own citizens. His genial heart and constant solicitude for the welfare and comfort of his passengers caused all who traveled with him to hold him in kind remembrance, and his death will be sincerely mourned by thousands of people in Southern California.

"The death of Captain Johnston recalls the fact that his ship, the 'Orizaba,' has made more trips to the port of San Diego than any other steamer. Her first arrival at this port was on the 10th of December, 1865, under command of Captain John S. Batters."

For eleven years the "Orizaba" had been a familiar sight on San Diego Bay. She carried passengers and freight. The trips between San Diego and San Francisco were of the nature of junketings participated in by close friends; and in her time the two cities were nearer than ever they had been before or have been since. The Union carried almost as many San Francisco advertisements as San Diegan; and the old Herald carried more in Editor Ames' time! As an example of the cargo of this steamer, here is the shipment she took out of San Diego on October 6, 1878:

"* * * the largest honey shipment of the season—130 barrels and 1263 cases—equal to 108,464 lbs., or over 54 tons. She also took 98,226 lbs. wheat, 8212 lbs. corn, 1506 lbs. abalone shells, 140 lbs. hides, 600 lbs. fish. 25,813 lbs. wool and 2800 lbs. beeswax."

"A pretty good single cargo of San Diego produce," says the Union.

Honey was the big business of that period here. Honey from these hills was considered the equal of the best honey ever produced anywhere in the world.

Point Loma history for 1878 may be suggested most forcefully in the letter of Professor W. D. Gunning, who at the time was contributing a series of letters from California to the Boston Journal.

"San Diego, September 2, 1878," he writes. "One day I drove out to Point Loma, a bold headland at the mouth of the bay, and near a shaft which the Mormons (this was once 'a stake of Zion') had sunk for coal, I observed a most wretched looking plant. The sprawling, spongey, milky, leafless trunk was three or four feet long. It was Euphorbia misera, new to science, but so old that in a few years it would swell the long list of dead species. Of all the face of the earth it possesses now only about half an acre. It would seem that in the struggle for life it had been depauperated and pushed up here against the sea to die."

"New to science, but so old"—like Point Loma itself! New to the bustling world, but so old that it could afford to wait and rest through its untold eons of reawakening, not dead, not sleeping, but as in a day-dream—can you imagine the flowers on these hillsides in 1858? There had been copious rains followed by warm days hundreds of warm days. The hills were perfectly unspoiled. The only trails had been made by Indians in the remote past, and by little animals scurrying back and forth, and by the wild cattle and horses that had roamed here during Spanish and early Mexican times. Menus hair and cliff brakes on every shaded ledge; creamy yuccas towering, stiff gray and purple yerba canta down the western slopes making blurred islands among stretches of blossoming white sage. Spreads of yellow violets, tufts of mariposa lilies—now so rare—and everywhere clumps and splashes of wild hyacinths, lupins, belladonna, mingling with a hundred varieties of composites!

O. B. BASEBALL

O. B. LOSES SECOND GAME

In the second game of the County league series, played at Chula Vista last Sunday, the Ocean Beach baseball team lost by a score of 4 to 1. The Vista bunch led in the hitting and were tabbed with one error, while the visitors made four slips. Five strike-outs were credited to the beach twirlers, Cox and Vitek.
